CENTRE FOR IBERO-AMERICAN AND TRANSATLANTIC STUDIES. Maria Zambrano Centre for Transatlantic Studies UMA-ATECH

The Maria Zambrano Centre for Transatlantic Studies of the University of Malaga is an academic, inter-university and multidisciplinary initiative, set up in 2012, to build cooperation and knowledge transfer bridges between the countries in the Atlantic region. Its main objective is to establish an academic and scientific framework around comparative transatlantic studies, with Europe, North America and South America as its central axis. It also provides a dynamic space for dialogue and cultural, social, political and economic exchanges. AMZET is part of the Centre for Ibero-American and Transatlantic Studies (CEIT).

AMZET International Network

The Maria Zambrano Centre for Transatlantic Studies at the University of Malaga coordinates an international network of homonymous centres to establish an academic and scientific exchange between Europe and America through training, research and dissemination of the Atlantic axis as a space for exchange and cooperation. This initiative was set up through inter-university agreements to create official centres and associations that partner with the network. AMZET is part of the Centre for Ibero-American and Transatlantic Studies FGUMA-UMA (CEIT).

In addition to these academic institutions, there are other university centres attached to the Network as partner centres and associations, or as institutions belonging to the coordinating centres of each country. This network continues to expand with the regular addition of new centres.

AMZET International Network Structure

The International Network of the Maria Zambrano Centres for Transatlantic Studies is divided into work areas spread across different countries:

- Spanish Area
- USA and Puerto Rican Area
- Argentinian Area
- Paraguayan Area
- Portuguese and Brazilian Area (Lusophony Area)
- Other areas in progress

This Network also has partner centres and associations in countries such as:

- Ireland, Canada, France and Mexico
- Other locations coming soon

TSN. Journal of International Studies

TSN is an academic and scientific journal published by the Centre for Ibero-American and Transatlantic Studies FGUMA-UMA and the research group Communication and Information Society Studies Group (E-COM). It is a six-monthly publication with articles in Spanish, English, French and Portuguese. It has a network of reporters and collaborators in countries such as Spain, USA, Puerto Rico, Argentina, Portugal, France, Mexico, Ireland, Brazil and Ecuador.
